Question 1:

(Narrator): Listen to part of a radio program.

(Man): On our program today we'll talk about food. With me in the studio is Dr. Theresa Madison, and she believes that people eat too much meat—and not enough vegetables.

(Woman): Yes—vegetables are very nutritious. They're full of vitamins and minerals essential for good health. I strongly recommend eating more vegetables and less meat.

(Man): But Dr. Madison—isn't it okay to eat a lot of meat if you exercise a lot?

(Woman): Quite frankly, physical exercise alone isn't very useful if you don't eat healthy foods.

(Narrator): What advice does the doctor give?
